

Hercules

This movie came out long before I was born and I vaguely remember watching it when I was young. I remember I really liked it and watched it a lot. My siblings and parents also liked the movie and I think we all watched it together at some point, although I don't really remember. I have watched the movie more recently and I still think it is a fantastic movie. I love the art style of it and I think it all looks amazing. The music is great and I love the way it is woven into the movie. I still think that having the narrator be a singing group that also interjects in some of the other songs is an amazing idea. This movie is pretty different from most other movies I have seen and I like the way that it did things differently than the standard way. The movie also reminds me of a time when I was younger and makes me feel nostalgic. I am still surprised about how well this movie holds up after so many years. I would have thought that I would not have liked it as much now that I am not a kid anymore, but I still like it just as much.

The Lion King

This is another movie that I loved when I was kid and still like to this day. Similar to Hercules, it is a movie that my whole family enjoyed watching and one that I know we watched together. I love the way that the movie is made in all aspects. The artwork is beautiful and still looks great today. I have always loved nature and this movie makes it look amazing. When I was young, seeing the beautiful landscapes in the movie is probably part of what made me like it so much. The music is also amazing with how it blends Swahili and English to make songs. I did not know what Swahili was when I was younger, so I just liked hearing words that sounded different and that I had never heard before. I have watched this movie more recently and I still think it is fantastic. The art and music are still amazing and I don't think I like it any less than I did when I was a kid. I think it is just a great movie that will never fail to make me happy. It reminds me of a simple time when I was just a kid seeing all of it for the first time.

Top Gun: Maverick

I saw this movie pretty recently with my dad and I really enjoyed it. We watched the original earlier the same day because I had never seen it before and he told me about what it was like back when the movie first came out. He talked about how it made everyone, including him, want to be pilots and I enjoyed hearing his stories about it. I had not really heard of the movie before the day we watched both movies, so i did not know what to expect. I was blown away by both movies and my dad enjoyed seeing me impressed by them. I have always enjoyed watching planes fly and this movie is about fighter jets. Seeing the way that they flew around and knowing that it was all done by real people in real planes was fascinating. The movie did not make me want to become a pilot, but I did think that it was amazing. My dad really liked it too and other people I have talked to have said they also really liked the movie. This movie just reminds me of a good day I had and that memory randomly pops into my head sometimes.

Forrest Gump

I had heard about this movie for a very long time, but never actually watched it until I was in seventh or eighth grade. I had no clue what it was about other than that the main character's name was Forrest Gump and that he ran. One day, one of my friends was sleeping over at my house and we were looking for a movie to watch. I saw Forrest Gump on Netflix and neither of us had seen it before so we decided to watch it. We had no clue what it was about and were very surprised at some of the more mature parts of the movie. We both really surprised with the story and how much we liked it. I thought the music was amazing and set the mood for the movie really well. I think the entire movie does a fantastic job of making it all feel real and feel like it really happened in the time period of the movie. I watched the movie again in a film class I had that same year and I enjoyed it just as much as when I watched it the first time. I have always loved how the movie went through a long period of time and you are able to see most of Forrest's life. I think this is what led to the movie being able to show different time periods and made it so good. I have seen this movie a bunch of times and I have always enjoyed it just as much as when I first saw it.

Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith

I loved Star Wars when I was growing up and saw all the movie multiple times. I loved all of them but I remember the third one being my favorite. As I grew older I didn't like Star Wars as much as I used to. I still really liked it, but I did not watch the movies and since no new Star Wars movies were coming out, I just moved on from it. I didn't really like the seventh and eighth ones very much, but I thought they were alright. I started thinking that maybe the movies just were not as good as I remembered them being when I was younger. When my family got Disney Plus, I decided to rewatched all the old ones to see if they were as good as I remembered them being. The first two were not as good as I remembered them, but I still really liked them. Then I got to the third one and I remembered why I liked it so much. There was constant action with fantastic music and a great story. I was amazed by how good it was and reminded why I liked it so much when I was younger.
